

Faculty Lunch and Learn: The Teaching Gallery

Thursday, January 31

12–1p

Kemper Art Museum Study Room (Kemper 104)

Washington University faculty are invited to a light lunch and information session about the Museum's Teaching Gallery, an exhibition space dedicated to displaying works from the collection with direct connections to WashU courses. Proposals for the fall 2019 Teaching Gallery exhibition are now being accepted. In this informative Q&A, Museum staff will provide an overview of the program and answer questions about faculty-curated exhibition proposals.

The session, including a light lunch, is free, but registration is required. Contact Rochelle Caruthers, the Museum's University academic programs coordinator, at rochelle.caruthers@wustl.edu to register. Find out more at kemperartmuseum.wustl.edu/TeachingGallery.
